COASTING

Thom Vault

2 Peter 3:3,4, "Know this first of all, that in the last days mockers will come with their mocking, following after their own lusts, and saying, 'Where is the promise of His coming? For ever since the fathers fell asleep, all continues just as it was from the beginning of creation.'"

If the year 2020 has taught us anything it is how something so small that we cannot see it has the power to upend the routines we established and relied upon for years. It is so easy to get caught up thinking that tomorrow will just be like the day before. This is called the fallacy of composition. It is when we infer that the whole is true just because some parts of the whole happen to be true. God continually warns His people to not become complacent in our thinking.

We need to let our current circumstance warn us of the dangers in thinking and depending on things continuing as they have in the past. It should wake us to the urgency of ensuring our walk and lives are in alignment with Christ. We put ourselves in grave danger by trusting in the reliability of the physical world that surrounds us. When we put our trust in the things of this world, then we let the things or gods in this world replace our trust in God.

If we think the danger of complacency is only with regard to the physical world around us, we are warned about becoming satisfied with our own good qualities earlier in the book:

2 Peter 1:8, "For if these qualities are yours and are increasing, they render you neither useless nor unfruitful in the true knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ."

The list of qualities preceding this are all attributes (ex. knowledge, self-control, godliness, brotherly kindness) we should pursue. However, we are not to rest on our current standing in these qualities. With each of these qualities we are instructed to be increasing in them.

Christians cannot coast through life being complacent in our reliance on the physical world. This world, no matter how stable and reliable it seems, is transient and can never satisfy what our souls really need. However, we should also not be complacent with where we are now in our relationship with God and our good works of the past. Let us put our trust in God rather than things finding true contentment in the process. Also, let us continue increasing in the qualities Jesus personified for us rather than resting on our laurels.

"That we henceforth be no more children, tossed to and fro, and carried about with every wind of doctrine, by the sleight of men, and cunning craftiness, whereby they lie in wait to deceive; But speaking the truth in love, may grow up into him in all things, which is the head, even Christ:" (Ephesians 4:14,15)
