ALCOHOL AND THE BIBLE, Part 5

Nathan Franson

(Continued from last week) Some have gone so far as to make the case that the Bible does not explicitly call drinking alcohol a sin. Be careful, as it also does not call musical instruments in worship a sin, other mind altering drugs a sin, or even domestic abuse a sin. However, one can viably and accurately arrive at the conclusion they are all sins by reasoning through other parts of Scripture.

Do not assume the “best wine” meant fermented. Pliny wrote, “Good wine is that which is destitute of spirit.” Pliny, Plutarch, and Horace said the best wine was non-intoxicating. Habakkuk writes, “Woe to him who gives drink to his neighbor, pressing him to your bottle, even to make him drunk, that you may look on his nakedness!” (Hab. 2:15).

WEIGH THE EVIDENCE

The Bible does not say anything about how good or moral or beneficial alcohol is. No one has ever gone to the Bible first and determined drinking alcoholic beverages is a good thing. They have already had it in mind to drink, then feebly attempt to find any justification (including Scripture) to support their decision.

Consider also there were many false allegations against the Savior by the Pharisees and scribes. Luke writes, “The Son of Man has come eating and drinking, and you say, ‘Look, a glutton and a winebibber, a friend of tax collectors and sinners!’” (Lk. 7:34). Matthew writes, “The Son of Man came eating and drinking, and they say, ‘Look, a glutton and a winebibber, a friend of tax collectors and sinners!’ But wisdom is justified by her children” (Mat. 11:19). Solomon writes, “Do not mix with winebibbers, or with gluttonous eaters of meat;” (Prov. 23:20). The term “winebibber” means “given to wine” (Thayer). It also simply means a “wine drinker” (Vine’s). Both of these definitions harmonize with what Paul wrote (Eph. 5:18).

Paul set forth a vital list of qualifications for men who are willing to serve as deacons. Each one determines whether or not he is eligible. One item has become a wide area of discussion. Paul writes, “Likewise deacons must be reverent, not double-tongued, not given to much wine, not greedy for money” (1 Tim. 3:8). It is interesting the same wording is not given to the office of an elder. Many attempt to say this permits a deacon to drink, so long as they are only moderate. However, there are a few variables at work. The term much is polus (πολύς) which means, “in any respect” (Strong’s). Couple this with Solomon. He writes, “Be not over much wicked” (Ecc. 7:17). Certainly some wickedness would not be ok, neither would wicked in moderation or social wickedness. It is the same wording, yet does not take much to realize the desperation it takes to force it to validate a personal habit.

One of the major arguments for alcohol is for medicinal purposes. While some still may choose to refrain, which is their choice, there is a broad line between medicinal and recreational. At one point, it is evident the preacher Timothy is suffering from what many believe to be ulcers. Paul explains, “No longer drink only water, but use a little wine for your stomach’s sake and your frequent infirmities” (1 Tim. 5:23). The context infers it is not for enjoyment, fun, or recreation. Still, some contend a glass of wine per day helps the heart. This has already been disregarded by many doctors. The Mayo Clinic states the alcohol content is inconclusive. There are many anti-oxidants found in other juices. The skin of grapes contains Resveratrol, which protects the body against damage that can cause cancer and heart disease.

CONCLUSION

It is ironic how drug counselors teach against the harmful effects of alcohol, yet so many Christians try to argue that the Bible says it is just fine. Paul writes, “And whatever you do in word or deed, do all in the name of the Lord Jesus...” (Col. 3:17). When examining whether or not anything is acceptable to Christ, His word must be the standard of authority prior to drawing any conclusions. Otherwise it is backward reasoning.

“That we henceforth be no more children, tossed to and fro, and carried about with every wind of doctrine, by the sleight of men, and cunning craftiness, whereby they lie in wait to deceive; But speaking the truth in love, may grow up into him in all things, which is the head, even Christ:” (Ephesians 4:14,15)
